TJ and Ashley Schweigert both have grown up in ranching families, all across the state of Montana.

TJ's dad, Riggie Schweigert, has worked for numerous large cattle operations in Hardin, Boulder, Red Lodge, Havre, Wisdom, and the Miles City area before becoming a MT state brand inspector. He also raised American Quarter Horses along with his wife Nancy and 5 children. TJ has been exposed to the horse and cattle industry since a very young age, having those experiences has provided him with the knowledge it takes to raise good quality horses.

Ashley's love of breeding and raising horses came about at a very young age as well, in Northeastern Montana. Both her mother and her grandparents started with a few mares breeding them to outside stallions with the intention of having good horses for the Farm. This gradually turned into Ashley competing in Open and local Junior Rodeos with one of those foals, eventually breeding her to Betty and Harvey Lapke's stallions, who lived just down the road. Ashley began helping them out with their breeding operation whenever she could.

The products of those breedings coupled with her Great Uncle, Tom Fornall's teachings, Ashley started those colts, continuing on to show in MQHA shows as well as competing in High School and College Rodeo. Ashley's step-dad, Charles Hellickson, also helped greatly in the development of her horse desires, living and working on several ranches across Montana, Ashley learned how to handle and to read cattle and what ranching requires of a horse. This only added fuel to her desire for breeding a truly versatile horse. One that could handle all the aspects of ranch life, to have conformation correct enough to show, speed and agility to run barrels or rope, gentle enough for anyone to handle, and be generally easy on the eyes.

During and after High School, Ashley worked for multiple different trainers, everything from basic colt starters, reiners, barrels, rope horse, working cow, team penners, and race, both Thoroughbred and Quarter Horses, learning many different disciplines and what it takes to build them. Through this she also saw the difference in conformation and breeding that is common for these specific disciplines and believes that a better horse can always be made with planning and careful breeding.

Most of T Lazy S Ranch's breeding stock comes from this long line of breeding and ideology based on both TJ and Ashley's experiences. In 2009, Ashley received an AQHA 10 year Breeder Award.
